

Digital storytelling project

The Australasian Occupational Science Centre (AOSC) is commissioning an interactive multimedia piece that features a number of community-based activity programs in the Illawarra region. The aim of this project is to create an attractive and stimulating piece of interactive work that promotes an occupational perspective of health to a broad audience. An occupational perspective of health is a key concept in occupational science.

The final work will be used in events such as public presentations, conferences and consultation meetings as a promotional tool. The work will clearly communicate the occupational perspective of health and in particular will highlight the health benefits for older people when they participate in engaging community-based activity programs.

This is a collaborative project involving AOSC and the UOW's Faculty of Creative Arts. The project has been incorporated into the curricula for the third year students in the School of Art & Design undertaking DESN311 – Interactive Multi Media.
